

GIANT SMASH ON SIX-MILE FRONT

Combles and Thiepval Further Imperiled.

BRITISH TAKE THREE TOWNS

Greatest Advance Since Beginning of Offensive in the West Yields Much Ground to Allies—Berlin Claims Repulse—Bulgars Quit Kastoria.

London, Sept. 16.—Smashing the German line on a front of six miles north of the Somme in France, the British forces have made probably the most notable advance since the Anglo-French offensive began, July 1. Three towns, two woods and the possession of nearly all the high ground between Combles and the Pozieres-Bapaume road fell to the British.

Not only did the Germans lose these points, but the British drive imperils the Combles and Thiepval positions, at either end of the British front.

The gaining of the high ground north of Combles gives the British command of the approaches to Bapaume.

The advance on the northern end of the front was for a distance of two miles.

Ginchy Capture Secured.

Courcellette, east of Thiepval and north of the Pozieres-Bapaume road, and Martinpeich, south of the road, fell into the hands of General Haig's men. Further south of the road they took Fleres and the High wood, making secure their possession of Ginchy. The Bouleaux wood, north of Combles, also was lost to the Germans.

The Germans under Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria fought stubbornly to hold their ground, and the fighting was severe all along the line. More than 2,300 prisoners were taken by the British.

Aiding the British in the encirclement of Combles, the French have taken additional trenches north of La Prieze farm.

South of the river three German trenches near Boisy-en-Santerre were taken by the French, who also captured 200 prisoners.

Berlin Claims Repulse.

Berlin claims the repulse of British attacks southeast of Thiepval and of French efforts between Rancourt and the Somme. The official statement admits the loss of Le Prieze farm.

In Northern Macedonia the British, French and Serbian armies have gained additional successes.

Unofficially, it is reported, the Bulgarians retreated twelve miles in front of the entente rush, and Athens reports the abandonment of Kastoria by the Bulgars. Berlin says entente attacks in the Moglenica sector and east of the Vardar were repulsed.

The Italians have begun a new drive toward Trieste. Lines of Austrian entrenchments east of the Vallone have been taken. Rome reports, together with more than 2,100 prisoners.

Failure, Vienna Says.

Vienna, while admitting Italian successes on the Isonzo front, declares the first assault is looked upon as a failure.

In the Dobrudja region of Roumania Bucharest admits that the Russians and Roumanian troops are retiring northward before the advance of the forces of the Central Powers. Violent fighting is in progress in this region.

In Transylvania, however, the Roumanian forces are continuing their progress and have reached the Aluta river northwest of Kronstadt.

There has been no change in the situation on the Eastern front from the Carpathians to Riga.

OPPONENTS ATTACK PREMIER

Clash of Tisza With Apponyi and Rakovsky Exciting.

Budapest, Sept. 16.—The Hungarian parliament again was the scene of great excitement when Count Albert Apponyi, Stephen Rakovsky and other opposition leaders attacked Premier Tisza, who defended himself by criticizing them.

Shellhorn of Monteville, Mo., in a search for the latter's father, a man seventy years old, and wearing long gray whiskers, who left his Missouri home a month ago to look for a farm in Minnesota. The son fears that he met with some misfortune.

EMPRESS OF GERMANY.

Summoned to Eastern Headquarters by Emperor William.

Dispatches from Amsterdam announce that Empress Augusta Victoria has been summoned to the Eastern headquarters by Emperor William, and passed through Breslau on the journey from Berlin. It will be her first visit to the Eastern front.

U. S. IS AFFECTED BY BRITISH ORDER

London, Sept. 16.—The plan of rationing the neutral countries of Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Holland, under which no further licenses will be granted for the present to British exporters, has been extended to apply to the United States by the expedient of refusing to allow the Netherlands' Overseas trust to accept further American consignments and by declining to grant letters of assurance for American shipments destined for these countries.

In consequence, American shipments for Holland will be stopped absolutely, while the regular transportation companies trading between the United States and Scandinavia will not take cargoes without assurances of their innocent destination by the British authorities.

DENIES CENSORSHIP ABUSE

Lloyd-George Says Trade Secrets Will Not Be Stolen.

London, Sept. 16.—David Lloyd-George, British secretary for war gave out the following statement:

"There appears to be a deliberate campaign, set on foot in the United States by German agents to throw doubt on the good faith of his majesty's government in regard to the use of information obtained through the censorship."

"These German agents appear now to have resurrected my statement in the house of commons on Aug. 8, although that statement was fully explained by Lord Robert Cecil, minister of war trade, on Aug. 9, and most explicit assurances on the same subject were given by him in a later interview on Aug. 25."

"In spite of this, these propagandists are trying to dress out my statement as something new, nullifying Lord Robert Cecil's assurances which followed it. Let me now say on behalf of the military authorities what has already been said on behalf of the foreign office—that when information is passed on by the censorship to other departments it is for the sole purpose of guiding the action of the government in the conduct of the war."

Mr. Monnett and Mr. Taylor maintained the proceedings of the grand jury which indicted them are irregular and asked the charges be dismissed.

They must now stand trial along with the other defendants.

MEN SUFFER FROM WEATHER

Burnquist's Decision Follows Action of Illinois Executive—War Department Fails to Furnish Winter Equipment for Men at Camp Bobleter.

St. Paul, Sept. 16.—Relief is in sight for the men and officers of the First Minnesota field artillery under canvas at Camp Bobleter.

Governor Burnquist says he will petition the war department for a furlough for the men in the event of continued cold weather and an expression from the officers and men stating they desire him to take such action.

The governor's statement followed a dispatch from Springfield, Ill., to the effect that Governor Dunne had taken similar action regarding the Illinois militiamen.

Will Act If Requested.

"If it is found the men at Camp Bobleter are suffering from the inclement weather and they make a request for such action, I shall consider it," the governor said.

Although officers at the camp say they made requisition to the war department several months ago for winter equipment, none has been forthcoming and the soldiers have been subjected to suffering through lack of proper clothing and bedding.

Tired of waiting for action on the request for winter equipment to the central department, state officers distributed among the men more than 200 overcoats.

Although the coats are of the vintage of '61 they were received joyfully by the shivering militiamen.

The coats are some that have been in the state storehouses for many years. They are said to be at least twenty years old.

Members of A and C batteries received these coats. Members of B battery were provided with overcoats bought with money from the battery fund.

Bail was fixed at $2,500, Chicago advises say.

According to dispatches William Ravenkamp and Lem Nutter were named in the same indictment and on similar charges. They are in the custody of State's Attorney Hoyne. Both have confessed, it is said, and are expected to be given immunity when Bond is placed on trial.

"I have the goods on Bond now, and don't believe he can make use of any more technicalities," Mr. Hoyne is quoted in the Chicago telegrams. "I have obtained convictions from a number of thieves involving Bond. One said Bond paid him $500 to steal a certain automobile."

Most of the cars said to have been stolen by the "syndicate" were sold in Montana and other Western states, Mr. Hoyne says.

Although officers at the camp say they made requisition to the war department several months ago for winter equipment, none has been forthcoming and the soldiers have been subjected to suffering through lack of proper clothing and bedding.

Tired of waiting for action on the request for winter equipment to the central department, state officers distributed among the men more than 200 overcoats.

Although the coats are of the vintage of '61 they were received joyfully by the shivering militiamen.

The coats are some that have been in the state storehouses for many years. They are said to be at least twenty years old.

Members of A and C batteries received these coats. Members of B battery were provided with overcoats bought with money from the battery fund.

RE-ARREST BOND ON CHICAGO INDICTMENT

Minneapolis, Sept. 16.—Ira Bond, Minneapolis broker, indicted in Chicago on charges of larceny and receiving stolen property in connection with an alleged automobile theft syndicate was arrested in his office here.

He was arrested in Davenport, Ia., several weeks ago in connection with the theft of automobiles, but obtained his release on a technicality. Later he was arrested in Chicago at the request of the state's attorney but was released on a writ of habeas corpus.

The broker is reputed to be worth $1,000,000. Bail was fixed at $2,500, Chicago advises say.

According to dispatches William Havenkamp and Lem Nutter were named in the same indictment and on similar charges. They are in the custody of State's Attorney Hoynes. Both have confessed, it is said, and are expected to be given immunity when bond is placed on trial.

"I have the goods on Bond now, and don't believe he can make use of any more technicalities," Mr. Hoynes is quoted in the Chicago telegrams. "I have obtained confessions from a number of thieves involving Bond. One said Bond paid him $500 to steal a certain automobile."

Most of the cars said to have been stolen by the "syndicate" were sold in Montana and other Western states, Mr. Hoynes says.

INDIAN CONFERENCE ENDS

Church Session Attended by 2,000 Delegates.

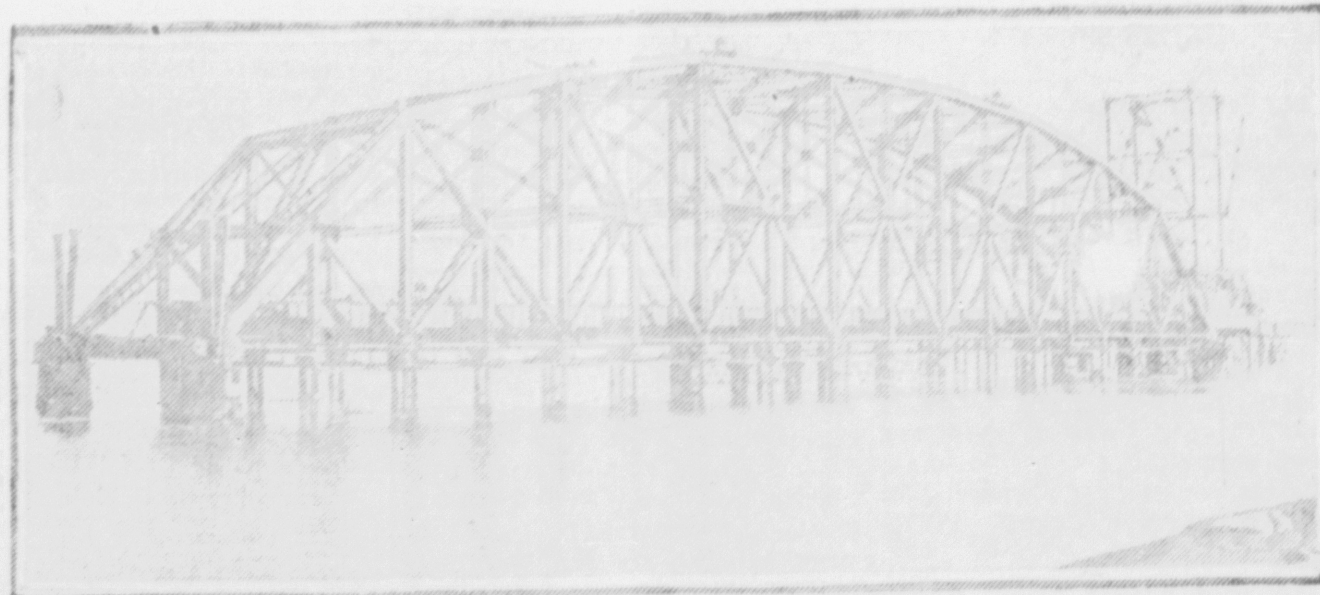

Cannon Ball, N. D., Sept. 16.—Attended by 2,000 Indians of North and South Dakota, Montana and Nebraska, the annual Indian conference of the Congregational and Presbyterian churches has been brought to a close here. It was the largest gathering in the history of the missions.

Prominent among the missionaries was Rev. Dr. Williamson, now almost eighty-one years old, who has spent nearly all his life among the Indians, being the first white child born in Minnesota, west of Fort Snelling.

Train Hurls Death Stone.

Oconomowoc, Wis., Sept. 16.—A stone hurled from the track by a passenger train struck and killed Louis Pappas, fifty years old, of Chicago, a track walker.

Twenty-Five Killed When This Great Span Fell

Canadian cabinet officers and officials on a gala day saw twenty-five workmen killed when this great central span of the $17,000,000 Quebec Bridge over the St. Lawrence River broke loose and plunged to the bottom, 200 feet below. It was the second accident on the bridge, the first nine years ago, when another span fell, having resulted in the death of eighty-four workmen.

The bridge was built for the purpose of shortening the railway journey across the continent by about 200 miles. It was to be used by eight railways, the C. P. R., Grand Trunk, Delaware & Hudson, Intercolonial, Quebec Central, Quebec & Lake

St. John, Quebec & Saguenay and Canadian Northern.

The principal dimensions of the bridge are: Length, from shore to shore, 3,839 feet; width between buttresses, 1,800 feet; length of central span, 640 feet; height of central span above river, 150 feet.

Chihuahua City, Mex., Sept. 16.—
The cordon of Constitutional forces thrown around Villa and his band has come into contact at last with rebels
along the section held by General Cavazos, according to reports received by General Trevino.

While Cavazos is engaging the Villa
followers on the Rancho de Las Varas,

Bustillos, the commands of General Vargas are expected on the scene at any time.

From information received here, all avenues of escape for the bandits have

GENERAL ELECTIONS CALLED

Mexico About to Become Genuine Republic Again.

Mexico City, Sept. 16.—Mexico is
about to resume her place among the republics after four years of revolutions.

A decree issued by President Carranza on the eve of the celebration of
the anniversary of Mexican independence paves the way for the de facto
government to be replaced by a constitutional one.

The decree makes provision for election of members of a national congress. Another will be issued calling for the election of a constitutional
congress on Oct. 14.

The first session of congress will be Nov. 26, probably at Coahuila, a suburb of Mexico City.

tion of birds and wild animals,
is preparing to issue a proclamation declaring war on the English sparrow and setting
aside a week for waging it, possibly in April or May of next year.

The governors of all states
will be asked to aid the work.

Wilson's Relief Plan Turned Down.

Washington, Sept. 16.—Government
officials have virtually given up hope,
it was learned here, for bringing Germany, France and England together
on a proposition to get relief into Pol-
and. This belief was expressed upon receipt and perusal of letters from the
emperor, King George and President
Wilson's personal letter on the subject
to those three government heads.

Tribulation.

Our word tribulation comes from the Latin tribulum, a thrashing instrument or harrow.

HIS FORMAL REPRIMAND.

It Was Not Exactly the Kind He Was Asked to Administer.

Dr. Simon Parvin, an English clergy-
man, was at times absurdly absent-minded. Once while he was visiting
in the home of a very great lady who
employed a large staff of servants,
whom she kept under extremely rigid control, it chanced that two young footmen fell out about a pretty house-
maid who had coquetted with both
and so far forgot themselves as to engage in fistfights. The old countess was indignant. Her first intention
was to dismiss the culprits, but they
were excellent servants, and, moreover, the repentant maid tearfully interceded for them. The countess relented so far as to reduce the sentence
to a formal reprimand before the other servants—a reprimand in the nature of a moral lecture to be duly administered by her distinguished guest.
At her earliest request—she was herself confined to her room by gout—
Dr. Parvin, a man of imposing presence and resonant voice, permitted
himself to be escorted to the servants'
hall. On his return she sent for him
to come to her chamber to relate the
result of his mission.

"A fine couple," said Dr. Parvin. "I should say, an excellent match."
"Match?" inquired the countess.
"What match? Has the silly girl
made up her mind between them,
then? I vow, I thought she meant to fist them both, and serve the booties right. Pray tell me, how did John and Thomas receive their reprimand?"

"John? Thomas? Reprimand?" echoed
Dr. Parvin vaguely; then, with a sudden, dismaying flash of memory: "Dear
me, I fear I have made a singular mistake! When I entered the room the younger servants were at the far end
in a group, and the butler and housekeeper were together, quite near, immediately in front of me. In fact,
standing side by side, and—in short,
madam, I married them!"

He had, indeed; but, although astonished, they were fortunately not unwilling. They had, it happened, long
been contemplating matrimony and
were deterred only by fear of the countess' disapproval. Believing that she would not disapprove the act of her
eminent guest, they had readily abetted Dr. Parvin in his error. The countess was angry, but her anger fell
chiefly upon the absentminded divine.
She gave him a piece of her mind that
—if he had been any one else—he
would not easily have forgotten.—
Youth's Companion.

Two Ways of Studying Music.

Picture to yourself a little girl of
seven or eight seated before that pon-
derous and portentous mass of iron,
steel, wood, wires and hammers which
we call a "piano" (forté) (sixty pounds of tender, delicate humanity trying to express itself through a solid ton, her
legs dangling uncomfortably in space,
her little fingers trying painfully to
find the right key and at the same
time to keep in a correct position,
struggling hard the while to relate together two strange things, a curious
black dot, on a page and an ivory key
two feet below it, for neither of which she feels much affection. And then picture to yourself the same child at
its mother's knee or with other children singing with joy and delight a beautiful song.—Thomas Whitney Surrette in Atlantic.

Economy.

"You spend entirely too much money
on dress," said the man of the house.
"That simple little frock Mrs. Smythe
wore last night looked a great deal
better than that elaborate gown of
yours."

"Of course it did, my dear," replied
his wife sweetly. "That simple little frock, as you call it, cost $300, while
mine cost only $150."
"Well, then, go out and buy one
about twice as elaborate as the one you've got. Maybe you can get it for nothing."—New York World.

The Hard Struggle.

"It's a tough struggle."
"What is?"
"Doing without the things we actually have to have to try to keep up the payments on the luxuries we didn't need."—Detroit Free Press.

GENERAL ELECTIONS CALLED

Mexico About to Become Genuine Re-
public Again.

Mexico City, Sept. 16.—Mexico is
about to resume her place among the
republics after four years of revolu-
tions.

A decree issued by President Carranza on the eve of the celebration of
the anniversary of Mexican independence paves the way for the de facto
government to be replaced by a constitutional one.

The decree makes provision for election of members of a national congress. Another will be issued calling
for the election of a constitutional
congress on Oct. 14.

The first session of congress will
be Nov. 26, probably at Cuernavaca,
a suburb of Mexico City.

Wilson's Relief Plan Turned Down.

Washington, Sept. 16.—Government
officials have virtually given up hope,
it was learned here, for bringing Ger-
many, France and England together
on a proposition to get relief into Pol-
and. This belief was expressed upon
receipt and perusal of letters from the
emperor, King George and President
Poincare answering President Wilson's personal letter on the subject
to those three government heads.

HIS FORMAL REPRIMAND.

It Was Not Exactly the Kind He Was
Asked to Administer.

Dr. Simon Parvin, an English clergy-
man, was at times absurdly absent-
minded. Once while he was visiting
in the home of a very great lady who
employed a large staff of servants,
she kept under extremely rigid control. It chanced that two young
footmen fell out about a pretty house-
maid who had coquetted with both
and so far forgot themselves as to engage in fistfuffs. The old countess was indignant. Her first intention
was to dismiss the culprits, but they
were excellent servants, and, more-
over, the repentant maid tearfully in-
terceded for them. The countess re-
lented so far as to reduce the sentence
to a formal reprimand before the other servants—a reprimand in the nature of a moral lecture to be duly administered by her distinguished guest.
At her earliest request—she was her-
self confined to her room by gout—
Dr. Parvin, a man of imposing presence and resonant voice, permitted
himself to be escorted to the servants'
hall. On his return she sent for him
to come to her chamber to relate the
result of his mission.

"A fine couple," said Dr. Parvin. "I should say, an excellent match."
"Match?" inquired the countess.
"What match? Has the silly girl
made up her mind between them,
then? I vow, I thought she meant to jilt them both, and serve the booties
right. Pray tell me, how did John and
Thomas receive their reprimand?"

"John? Thomas? Reprimand?" echoed
Dr. Parvin vaguely; then, with a sudden, dismaying flash of memory: "Dear
me, I fear I have made a singular mistake! When I entered the room the
younger servants were at the far end
in a group, and the butler and house-
keeper were together, quite near, immediately in front of me. In fact,
standing side by side, and—in short,
madam, I married them!"

He had, indeed; but, although astonished, they were fortunately not unwilling. They had, it happened, long
been contemplating matrimony and
were deterred only by fear of the countess' disapproval. Believing that she
would not disapprove the act of her
eminent guest, they had readily abet-
ted Dr. Parvin in his error. The
countess was angry, but her anger fell
chiefly upon the absentminded divine.
She gave him a piece of her mind that
—if he had been any one else—he
would not easily have forgotten.—

Two Ways of Studying Music.

Picture to yourself a little girl of
seven or eight seated before that pon-
derous and portentous mass of iron,
steel, wood, wires and hammers which
we call a "piano" (sixty pounds of tender, delicate humanity trying to express itself through a solid ton, her
legs dangling uncomfortably in space,
her little fingers trying painfully to
find the right key and at the same
time to keep in a correct position,
struggling hard the while to relate together two strange things, a curious
black dot, on a page and an ivory key
two feet below it, for neither of which
she feels much affection. And then
picture to yourself the same child at
its mother's knee or with other children singing with joy and delight a beautiful song.—Thomas Whitney Surette in Atlantic.

Economy.

"You spend entirely too much money
on dress," said the man of the house.
"That simple little frock Mrs. Smythe
wore last night looked a great deal
better than that elaborate gown of
yours."

"Of course it did, my dear," replied
his wife sweetly. "That simple little
frock, as you call it, cost $300, while
mine cost only $150."

"Well, then, go out and buy one
about twice as elaborate as the one
you've got. Maybe you can get it for
nothing."—New York World.

FIRST ENTERTAINMENT

The Croatian Tamburica to Play in Lyceum Course in October

One of the most interesting numbers of the Lyceum course obtained by the Baraca class of Brainerd is the Croatian Tamburica orchestra, which will play in the city in October.

The Croatian Tamburica orchestra was discovered playing at the Paris exposition and was brought to this country. They have appeared two seasons with the White-Myers Chautauqua circuit and two seasons with the Midland Chautauqua circuit. Their wonderful instruments have power and sweetness beyond description. The Croatian hails from a small country, of which Agram is the capital, near Serbia, and just south of Austria. As a race they are Slavs.

The Daily Commercial of Three Rivers, Mich., had this to say of the lyceum number:

The concluding number of the Chautauqua was furnished by the Croatian Tamburica orchestra and was very entertaining. The Tamburica is a peculiar native instrument of the people of Croatia, a province of Austria-Hungary. It has been the household instrument of these people for generations, but was not introduced into the outside world to any extent until the last half of the nineteenth century, and it was at the exposition at Paris, France, where it really gained a place among the cultured nations of the world.

The instrument itself is similar to the mandolin, banjo and guitar, but different from them all. It produces more life and sweetness of tone and is especially adapted to orchestra work.

The range of music played by these people is almost limitless. They go from classical to the popular, and from the simplest compositions to the most intricate of native music.

The Boy Bushwhacker

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Two American boys, whose fathers were engaged in business in northern Mexico, were out hunting. What they were after was not rabbits or squirrels or birds. They wanted bigger game. They were bushwhackers. From behind a tree, a stone or a bush they would pick off the bandits. Their homes had been plundered and the brother of one of them, George Dorrance, had been killed by the men they were now taking revenge upon.

George had lain in wait for a stranger from the band of one Alvarez and shot him from behind a tree. Immediately after the deed was done a Mexican woman, who knew George, saw him emerge from the timber. Passing along the road she saw the dead bandit lying on his back, his glassy eye looking up at the peaceful blue sky. Alvarez had heard the shot behind him and, desiring to know what it was about, turned and rode back. Seeing the dead man, he asked the woman who shot him. She told him that George Dorrance had done the deed, and pointed in the direction George had gone.

Warren Edwards, George's companion, was waiting for him not far distant, and they moved on together toward George's home. Presently looking back, they saw Alvarez coming. He was on an elevation in the ground, and they were on another. The Dorrance house was a short distance below, and, boylike, instead of going into hiding anywhere else they made for it. They were met at the door by Mrs. Dorrance.

"Mother," said George, "I shot a bandit, and I think one of 'em is coming for me."

A moment's thought decided her, and she led them to a garret, uncelled and the joists above uncovered. On these joists were piled some old beds.

"Get up there," said the woman.

The boys climbed up and hid themselves in the bedding. Unfortunately, Alvarez had seen them go into the house and knew they were there. He was full of wrath at the loss of his man and determined to wreak it on the slayer. Hiding up to the house, he threw himself from his horse and stalked in with knitted brow and a merciless look in his eye.

"I want a boy named George Dorrance," he said to George's mother.

"There's no such boy here."

"He is here; I saw him come in with another boy a few minutes ago. You might as well produce him and save me the trouble of looking for him."

"What do you want to do with him?"

"Never mind that; tell him to come out of hiding."

The woman stuck to it that George was not in the house.

"Are you his mother?" asked the bandit.

"Yes."

As soon as he received this reply Alvarez gave up trying to persuade or frighten the woman into giving up her son and went through the house searching for him. As soon as he saw the beds stored on the joists above the garret, recognizing it as a most likely hiding place, he examined it and yanked the boys out. Hustling them down stairs, he took them out in front of the house.

"Which of you boys is George Dorrance?" he asked.

Neither replied. Alvarez asked the question of Mrs. Dorrance, who had followed them out of the house. She would not reply.

"I want to know," said Alvarez angrily, "which one of you boys is George Dorrance, who just now shot one of my men. If I can't find out I'll kill you both, for I'm determined to kill the one who did the bushwhacking."

George declined to give the required information, and Warren was determined that he would not betray his friend. Whether Alvarez admired an act of heroism on the part of one of the boys unknown to him or from some other cause he did not carry out this threat to kill both. He resorted to a device to learn the truth. He had seen the boys' guns standing in a corner in the house. He stepped inside, brought them out and, keeping the boys covered with a revolver, handed each boy a gun. Then he told them, when he gave the word, to fire on Mrs. Dorrance, and the boy who failed to inflict a death wound should die. In this way he expected to discover which was her son, for no boy would thus kill his mother.

But the test was interrupted. He had scarcely handed the guns to the boys when there came the metallic notes of a bugle. Alvarez, without even looking to see whence it came, leaped on to his horse and, digging the heels of his spurs into the beast's flanks, was off like a flash.

But the boys had the guns. Two reports rang out together, and Alvarez's body was left in the dust while his horse ran on.

A few minutes later a company of the —th United States cavalry rode past the house. The captain was notified that Alvarez's band was in the neighborhood and, taking the boys for guides, hurried away to attack them.

Some of the bandits were coming back to look for their commander, but, seeing the troopers, turned and fled. They were pursued and gave the alarm to their comrades, but it was too late. The robbers were obliged to turn and fight; but, not having their commander to lead them, they were routed and most of them either killed or captured.

PARENT-TEACHERS MEETING

The Croatian Tamburica to Play in Lyceum Course in October

One of the most interesting numbers of the Lyceum course obtained by the Baraca class of Brainerd is the Croatian Tamburica orchestra, which will play in the city in October.

The Croatian Tamburica orchestra was discovered playing at the Paris exposition and was brought to this country. They have appeared two seasons with the White-Myers Chautauqua circuit and two seasons with the Midland Chautauqua circuit. Their wonderful instruments have power and sweetness beyond description. The Croatian hills from a small country, of which Agram is the capital, near Serbia, and just south of Austria. As a race they are Slavs.

The Daily Commercial of Three Rivers, Mich., had this to say of the Lyceum number:

The concluding number of the Chautauqua was furnished by the Croatian Tamburica orchestra and was very entertaining. The Tamburica is a peculiar native instrument of the people of Croatia, a province of Austria-Hungary. It has been the household instrument of these people for generations, but was not introduced into the outside world to any extent until the last half of the nineteenth century, and it was at the exposition at Paris, France, where it really gained a place among the cultured nations of the world.

The instrument itself is similar to the mandolin, banjo and guitar, but different from them all. It produces more life and sweetness of tone and is especially adapted to orchestra work.

The range of music played by these people is almost limitless. They go from classical to the popular, and from the simplest compositions to the most intricate of native music.

The Boy Bushwhacker

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Two American boys, whose fathers were engaged in business in northern Mexico, were out hunting. What they were after was not rabbits or squirrels or birds. They wanted bigger game. They were bushwhackers. From behind a tree, a stone or a bush they would pick off the bandits. Their homes had been plundered and the brother of one of them, George Dorrance, had been killed by the men they were now taking revenge upon.

George had lain in wait for a stranger from the band of one Alvarez and shot him from behind a tree. Immediately after the deed was done a Mexican woman, who knew George, saw him emerge from the timber. Passing along the road she saw the dead bandit lying on his back, his glassy eye looking up at the peaceful blue sky. Alvarez had heard the shot behind him and, desiring to know what it was about, turned and rode back. Seeing the dead man, he asked the woman who shot him. She told him that George Dorrance had done the deed, and pointed in the direction George had gone.

Warren Edwards, George's companion, was waiting for him not far distant, and they moved on together toward George's home. Presently looking back, they saw Alvarez coming. He was on an elevation in the ground, and they were on another. The Dorrance house was a short distance below, and, heylake, instead of going into hiding anywhere else they made for it. They were met at the door by Mrs. Dorrance.

"Mother," said George, "I shot a bandit, and I think one of 'em is coming for me."

A moment's thought decided her, and she led them to a garret, uncelled, and the joists above uncovered. On these joists were piled some old beds.

"Get up there," said the woman. The boys climbed up and hid themselves in the bedding. Unfortunately, Alvarez had seen them go into the house and knew they were there. He was full of wrath at the loss of his man and determined to wreak it on the slayer. Hiding up to the house, he threw himself from his horse and stalked in with knitted brow and a merciless look in his eye.

"I want a boy named George Dorrance," he said to George's mother.

"There's no such boy here."

"He is here; I saw him come in with another boy a few minutes ago. You might as well produce him and save me the trouble of looking for him."

"What do you want to do with him?"

"Never mind that; tell him to come out of hiding."

The woman stuck to it that George was not in the house.

"Are you his mother?" asked the bandit.

"Yes."

As soon as he received this reply Alvarez gave up trying to persuade or frighten the woman into giving up her son and went through the house searching for him. As soon as he saw the beds stored on the joists above the garret, recognizing it as a most likely hiding place, he examined it and yanked the boys out. Hurling them downstairs, he took them out in front of the house.

"Which of you boys is George Dorrance?" he asked.

Neither replied. Alvarez asked the question of Mrs. Dorrance, who had followed them out of the house. She would not reply.

"I want to know," said Alvarez angrily, "which one of you boys is George Dorrance, who just now shot one of my men. If I can't find out I'll kill you both, for I'm determined to kill the one who did the bushwhacking."

George declined to give the required information, and Warren was determined that he would not betray his friend. Whether Alvarez admired an act of heroism on the part of one of the boys unknown to him or from some other cause he did not carry out this threat to kill both. He resorted to a device to learn the truth. He had seen the boys' guns standing in a corner in the house. He stepped inside, brought them out, and, keeping the boys covered with a revolver, handed each boy a gun. Then he told them, when he gave the word, to fire on Mrs. Dorrance, and the boy who failed to inflict a death wound should die. In this way he expected to discover which was her son, for no boy would thus kill his mother.

But the test was interrupted. He had scarcely handed the guns to the boys when there came the metallic notes of a bugle. Alvarez, without even looking to see whence it came, leaped on to his horse and, digging the heels of his spurs into the beast's flanks, was off like a flash.

But the boys had the guns. Two reports rang out together, and Alvarez's body was left in the dust while his horse ran on.

A few minutes later a company of the —th United States cavalry rode past the house. The captain was notified that Alvarez's band was in the neighborhood and, taking the boys for guides, hurried away to attack them.

Some of the bandits were coming back to look for their commander, but, seeing the troopers, turned and fled. They were pursued and gave the alarm to their comrades, but it was too late. The robbers were obliged to turn and fight; but, not having their commander to lead them, they were routed and most of them either killed or captured.

Political Jottings

Mr. McCormick follows the same method in claiming credit for legislation he does in his predictions. He includes several acts of the Taft Administration.

The Democratic press is convinced that it is the duty of Mr. Hughes to say something that will hurt his chance of being elected.

President Wilson in his acceptance speech may reply to Mr. Hughes' charges, but he will not answer them. That is an entirely different matter.

It is reported from Washington that the Administration will ignore most of Mr. Hughes' charges. That is very much the easiest way for it to answer them.

Governor Hughes announces in one of his speeches that he is a constructionist. But we are willing to admit that so far as Democratic policy is concerned he is a destructionist.

Tammany leader Charles F. Murphy announces that he will retire after the campaign. It is believed that many other more or less distinguished Democrats will follow his example.

Grover Cleveland was the last Democratic President. He was also the last President to issue bonds to secure money to defray the running expenses of the government. But Wilson will tie him in this.

President Wilson will be notified of the Democratic nomination at Shadow Lawn. This seems a most appropriate place for letting him know that he will shortly have to give up his place in the sun.

President Wilson will not make any speaking dates, we are told, but only separate engagements for addresses, considering a "speaking tour" undignified. "Too proud to fight."

What Josephine Daniels, the well-known nautical novelist, can't understand is why men should waste time flitting about at sea when they might just as well learn how to become sailors in three lessons in any good, reliable correspondence school.

THE COST OF BAD ROADS.

In an address before a convention of highway officials held recently in Washington the secretary of agriculture said:

"I need not emphasize before you the importance of good roads. Most intelligent people who think about good roads know that they are essential to comfortable living, essential to proper community development, especially to the development of rural life, to efficient production and orderly marketing of farm products, to schools and to the development of a satisfactory rural life.

"Many people, however, do not appreciate this. I have occasionally met road officers who, when the importance of good roads was emphasized, have said, 'Yes, but they cost so much.' Apparently they have not thought how much more bad roads cost, not only in dollars and cents, but also in all those indirect ways for which one can make no definite calculation."

What Happens to Them.

War's Effects In France

BY HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Paris, July 3 (By Mail).—Thanks largely to the historical "woolen sock bank" of the thrifty French, France today is financially and economically supporting the war without any serious strain on her national life while new elements the war has injected into industrial and economic life assure France industrial expansion without precedent when peace comes.

At the close of the war in 1870, when Germany imposed an indemnity of one billion dollars, it was the same "woolen sock bank" that saved France. To date, the war has cost France some $3,000,000,000, 73% for military expense.

To meet this gigantic financial burden, the people have loaned the government nearly $2,000,000,000. They have also paid nearly $1,500,000,000 in war taxes, making a total of $4,500,000,000, over half the cost of the war to date.

The French government has left with its people all the ready capital necessary for the full resumption of her industrial, commercial and agricultural activities the moment war ends.

By not imposing on her people the financial burdens of the war faster than their earning capacity will bear, France is able financially to continue the war now costing her over $18,000,000 a day, for an indefinite period, without crippling either her financial, economic or industrial life.

The influx of female labor into all branches of French industrial life since the war began, the suppression of absinthe and the restriction generally of alcoholic consumption, and above all the great lesson of industrial efficiency and maximum production which the war has taught France, hold out for her rosate prospects of the future that promise to compensate the loss in everything but human life the war has entailed on her.

Of the three great elements mentioned above that in two short years have revolutionized French industrial life, the greatest perhaps in industrial efficiency and maximum productivity. Previous to the war, industrial efficiency was almost unknown outside the United States and Germany. But today France is industrially efficient. It was the necessity of saving the nation by incredible increases in the production of munitions and military supplies that taught France the lesson.

France's output of powder today is 44 times greater than before the war, her output of rifles 237 times greater, machine guns 98 times greater, cannon 25 times greater, 75-shells 54 times greater, heavy artillery 23 times greater.

This increase in productivity, due in part to an increased number of factories, is due principally to perfected efficiency.

Munitions, however, tell only half the story. All supplies necessary for equipping and maintaining millions of men in the field tell the other half.

The chemical industry in France which before the war was monopolized by Germany, has tripled in southern France, in the vicinity of Limoges and Orlon, doubled; while in the vicinity of Lyons it has taken the form of new lines, entirely unknown in France before the war.

When peace comes, this lesson of efficiency will be applied to every industry in France with an increase in the national productivity and wealth calculated to startle the world.

Other lessons of efficiency and maximum productivity have been taught to the French by the Germans at heavy cost. The French iron fields of the Basin of Briey, held by the Germans since the beginning of hostilities, produced for the French in 1913, 15,000,000 tons of iron and steel. The Germans, since they got possession of them, have made them produce 21,000,000. When France gets them back, she proposes to make them produce as much for her as they did for the Germans.

Efficiency in agriculture also has come to France through the hard necessity of Prussian occupation. Since the beginning of hostilities the Germans have occupied 2,000,000 out of the 53,000,000 acres, 2,000,000 acres that are the most productive in France. Before the war they produced $1,000,000,000 annually or one-tenth of the national production and wealth.

Unfortunately with their passing into the hands of the enemy, France did not experience a corresponding decrease in her population. She has within her borders today, 1,000,000 war refugees—Belgians, Serbians, French, Alsations—so that 2,000,000 acres less of territory, she is still obliged to maintain her normal population of about 40,000,000. Enforced agricultural efficiency is enabling her to do it. Her wheat acreage for 1916 is 5,031,510 acres as against 6,571,580 in 1914 when she had 2,000,000 more acres of territory; her 1916 rye acreage is 920,975 as against 1,201,630 of 1914.

With the close of the war this agricultural efficiency and intensity will increase.

France has been unable to complete statistics on the miracles being wrought in her national productivity by the suppression of absinthe and the restriction of alcoholic consumption. Minister of Finance Ribot, however, states that the results are amazingly apparent and insure even greater restriction with the return of peace.

Before the war female labor was almost unknown in France. Estimates just completed state that with the end of the war women will represent from 75 to 80 per cent of the labor in France. In the munition work alone 150,000 women are now being employed.

Industries newly invaded by women here include food, chemicals, paper, printing, textiles, clothing, leather, wood, metal, pottery, transportation and business generally.

Popular Spirit In France

BY HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Paris, July 4 (By Mail).—"There is not a single piece of gold to be found in my house today."

With eyes flashing pride and voice vibrating with enthusiasm these words were pronounced to me by Professor Alcide Betrine of No. 166 Boulevard Montparnasse. I picked him at random to tell me something of the spirit of the French people after two years of war.

Professor Betrine has grown gray in the public school service of France. He is entitled to retire on a pension but he won't do it while the war lasts. Professor Betrine is proud to be able to say:

"For the first time in my life and in generations in the history of my family, there is not a single gold piece to be found in my house today. I have turned it all in to the Bank of France for the national defense."

The boast of Professor Betrine today is the boast of practically every family in France. Within the last year the French voluntarily have exchanged for flimsy French bank notes over $325,000,000 gold. This stream of gold has been flowing for a year and is still flowing at from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 a week. Such is the spirit of the French after two years of war.

"In every French family there are but two great passions—the only son and the little family hoard of gold."

It is the "little hoard of gold" on which every French household is built. Gold, in the popular French conception, is the one real, tangible thing in life on which anyone under any circumstances, can always count. It is the family's life, death, accident, health, marriage and disaster insurance in one.

Even if the "Boches" had actually reached Paris, the average Frenchman would have known he could still count on his gold to help him out.

This confidence in gold has reached in France, among the masses the status almost of a fetish. In thousands of families the gold has passed from generation to generation and been added to until it has taken on the additional sentimental value of a most highly prized heirloom. The average Frenchman figures his future and that of his family on his gold reserve.

Knowing all this, the government did not hesitate to ask for it. But it asked, it did not command. It knew that however much the gold meant to its sons and daughters, "La Patrie" meant much more.

The average French family man is inclined to be rather hard headed, calculating money-seeking and saving. "Hard-headed thrift" might easily pass as the motto in French family life.

Early in the war there was published in France and elsewhere an article of presumed German origin explaining why the war with France would not last long.

The French common people, it asserted, would never permit the war to reach a point where it would effect either their regular sources of income or the amount of money they might already have saved. That was one of the things the Germans counted on for a quick short campaign in France before turning to smash Russia.

Germany was mistaken as in the Irish rebellion, Canadian secession and Mohammedan uprising in English colonies. The French population has placed patriotism before pocket books.

The greatest test that could be applied to the French people after they had parted with their sons was to ask them to part without a sou

of recompense or premium, with their little family hoard of gold.

This is far from telling all the story of the possibilities of French thrift. It has enabled them to do far more than give the government gold. The French people have also subscribed some $3,000,000,000 to France's famous "Loan of Victory." French thrift—coupled necessarily with French spirit—has furnished France with the financial sinews for prosecuting the war. Parting with the gold was purely a matter of patriotic sentiment. Subscribing to the loan was a matter of careful investment. Yet this thrifty investment speaks perhaps more for the spirit of the French people than did the parting with the gold, for the loan subscription spelled in great big capital letters the one word "Confidence" in the financial stability of the French government and in its ability to win the war.

Now a final test is being made of the spirit of the French people. Minister of Finance Ribot has just estimated that there are being held in France no less than $120,000,000,000 of foreign bonds and securities. These would be of the most supreme value to France in enabling her to offer them as security for her large purchase of war and other material in foreign countries, without diminishing her gold reserve and without suffering the terrible rate of exchange—it is nearly 20 per cent in the United States—caused by the proportion of her importations over her exportations.

So France has asked—not ordered as has been necessary in England—her people to loan her these $120,000,000,000 of foreign securities until after the war. The response has been the same as to the request for gold and for war subscriptions.

The Bank of France has been obliged to open special bureaus in all principal cities and villages of France to receive these securities and so great is the number turned in and so fast have they come, that the Bank of France, at the moment this article is being written, is unable to give any figures on the amount up to date. It estimates that it will receive $120,000,000,000 worth.

Now the Chuck Hole Club.

What is a chuck hole club? It consists of four or five men or boys, one of whom has an automobile. Each member provides himself with a pick, shovel or spade; they climb into the car and fill every chuckhole, bad bridge approach and any other bad spot in their neighborhood that does not require the work of a regular road gang.

Each member agrees to fill at least one chuckhole a month and to encourage others to help improve the roads. Apparently there is nothing about the scheme which will not bear transplanting to any locality that is interested in better roads—Farm and Fliedise.

Easily Explained.

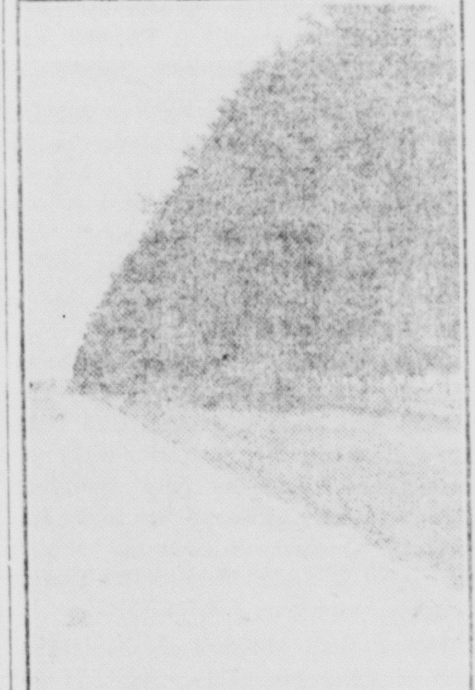

"Jones has been made manager of his company. How do you account for his good luck?"

"I don't know, but I presume the fact that he's been working eighteen hours a day for several years has had something to do with it."—Toledo Blade.

SHADE TREES ON STATE ROADS

New York College of Forestry Finds Great Neglect in This Respect.

By investigation just completed by the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse it has been found that nine-tenths of the roadsides in the rural districts of New York state are entirely void of shade trees. When this is considered along with the fact that last year New York state paid out of the state treasury about $30,000,000 for the construction and maintenance of roadbeds it shows that the state is not yet awake to the great need and the great possibilities in rural roadside improvement. The preliminary survey which has just been made by H. R. Francis, in charge of the landscape extension work of the College of Forestry, covered nearly 3,000 miles of the main lines of highways passing through such important points as Rochester, Buffalo, Jamestown, Olean, Hornell, Corning, Ithaca, Cortland, Elmira, Binghamton, Oneonta, Kingston, Hudson, Albany, Schenectady, Glens Falls, Lake Placid, Malone, Potsdam, Watertown, Utica, Rome and Syracuse.

During the survey studies were made of such important features in rural roadside improvement and beautification as good and bad varieties of trees found along the highways, views and vistas obtained from the highways, the effects of the shade trees on crops in adjacent fields, the possibilities of the covering of barren embankments and the planting of some desirable sort of vegetation where overhead wires are in large numbers. One of the principal features studied was the condition of the roadbed as affected by the presence or absence of shade trees.

This is the first comprehensive study to be made of the landscape treatment of the rural roadsides in the state, and the college predicts a wider appreciation of the possibilities and the necessity for the planting and preservation of forest trees along the rural roadsides.

Political Jottings

Mr. McCormick follows the same method in claiming credit for legislation he does in his predictions. He includes several acts of the Taft administration.

The Democratic press is convinced that it is the duty of Mr. Hughes to say something that will hurt his chance of being elected.

President Wilson in his acceptance speech may reply to Mr. Hughes' charges, but he will not answer them. That is an entirely different matter.

It is reported from Washington that the Administration will ignore most of Mr. Hughes' charges. That is very much the easiest way for it to answer them.

Governor Hughes announces in one of his speeches that he is a constructionist. But we are willing to admit that so far as Democratic policies are concerned he is a destructionist.

Tammany leader Charles F. Murphy announces that he will retire after the campaign. It is believed that many other more or less distinguished Democrats will follow his example.

Grover Cleveland was the last Democratic President. He was also the last President to issue bonds to secure money to defray the running expenses of the government. But Wilson will tie him in this.

President Wilson will be notified of the Democratic nomination at Shadow Lawn. This seems a most appropriate place for letting him know that he will shortly have to give up his place in the sun.

President Wilson will not make any speaking dates, we are told, but only separate engagements for addresses, considering a "speaking tour" undignified. "Too proud to fight."

What Josephine Daniels, the well-known nautical novelist, can't understand is why men should waste time floundering at sea when they might just as well learn how to become sailors in three lessons in any good, reliable correspondence school.

THE COST OF BAD ROADS.

In an address before a convention of highway officials held recently in Washington the secretary of agriculture said:

"I need not emphasize before you the importance of good roads. Most intelligent people who think about good roads know that they are essential to comfortable living, essential to proper community development, especially to the development of rural life, to efficient production and orderly marketing of farm products, to schools and to the development of a satisfactory rural life.

"Many people, however, do not appreciate this. I have occasionally met road officers who, when the importance of good roads was emphasized, have said, 'Yes, but they cost so much.' Apparently they have not thought how much more bad roads cost, not only in dollars and cents, but also in all those indirect ways for which one can make no definite calculation."

War's Effects In France

BY HENRY WOOD

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Paris, July 3 (By Mail).—Thanks largely to the historical "woolen sock bank" of the thrifty French, France today is financially and economically supporting the war without any serious strain on her national life while new elements the war has injected into industrial and economic life assure France industrial expansion without precedent when peace comes.

At the close of the war in 1870, when Germany imposed an indemnity of one billion dollars, it was the same "woolen sock bank" that saved France. To date, the war has cost France some $8,000,000,000, 73% for military expense.

To meet this gigantic financial burden, the people have loaned the government nearly $3,000,000,000. They have also paid nearly $1,500,000,000 in war taxes, making a total of $4,500,000,000, over half the cost of the war to date.

The French government has left with its people all the ready capital necessary for the full resumption of her industrial, commercial and agricultural activities the moment war ends.

By not imposing on her people the financial burdens of the war faster than their earning capacity will bear, France is able financially to continue the war now costing her over $18,000,000 a day, for an indefinite period, without crippling either her financial, economic or industrial life.

The influx of female labor into all branches of French industrial life since the war began, the suppression of alcohol and the restriction of generally of alcoholic consumption, and above all the great lesson of industrial efficiency and maximum production which the war has taught France, hold out for her rosate prospects of the future that promise to compensate the loss in everything but human life the war has entailed on her.

Of the three great elements mentioned above that in two short years have revolutionized French industrial life, the greatest perhaps in industrial efficiency and maximum production. Previous to the war, industrial efficiency was almost unknown outside the United States and Germany. But today France is industrially efficient. It was the necessity of saving the nation by incredible increases in the production of munitions and military supplies that taught France the lesson.

France's output of powder today is 44 times greater than before the war, her output of rifles 237 times greater, machine guns 98 times greater, cannon 25 times greater, 75-shells 54 times greater, heavy artillery 23 times greater.

This increase in productivity, due in part to an increased number of factories, is due principally to perfected efficiency.

Munitions, however, tell only half the story. All supplies necessary for equipping and maintaining millions of men in the field tell the other half.

The chemical industry in France which before the war was monopolized by Germany, has tripled in southern France, in the vicinity of Limoges and Orlon, doubled; while in the vicinity of Lyons it has taken the form of new lines, entirely unknown in France before the war.

When peace comes, this lesson of efficiency will be applied to every industry in France with an increase in the national productivity and wealth calculated to startle the world.

Other lessons of efficiency and maximum productivity have been taught to the French by the Germans at heavy cost. The French iron fields of the Basin of Briey, held by the Germans since the beginning of hostilities, produced for the French in 1913, 15,000,000 tons of iron and steel. The Germans, since they got possession of them, have made them produce 21,000,000. When France gets them back, she proposes to make them produce as much for her as they did for the Germans.

Efficiency in agriculture also has come to France through the hard necessity of Prussian occupation. Since the beginning of hostilities the Germans have occupied 2,000,000 out of the 53,000,000 acres, 2,000,000 acres that are the most productive in France. Before the war they produced $1,000,000,000 annually or one-tenth of the national production and wealth.

Unfortunately with their passing into the hands of the enemy, France did not experience a corresponding decrease in her population. She has within her borders today, 1,000,000 war refugees—Belgians, Serbians, French, Alsations—so that 2,000,000 acres less of territory, she is still obliged to maintain her normal population of about 40,000,000. Enforced agricultural efficiency is enabling her to do it. Her wheat acreage for 1916 is 5,031,510 acres as against 6,571,580 in 1914 when she had 2,000,000 more acres of territory; her 1916 rye acreage is 920,975 as against 1,201,630 of 1914.

With the close of the war this agricultural efficiency and intensity will increase.

France has been unable to complete statistics on the miracles being wrought in her national productivity by the suppression of alcohol and the restriction of alcoholic consumption. Minister of Finance Ribot, however, states that the results are amazingly apparent and insure even greater restriction with the return of peace.

Before the war female labor was almost unknown in France. Estimates just completed state that with the end of the war women will represent from 75 to 80 per cent of the labor in France. In the munition work alone 150,000 women are now being employed.

Industries newly invaded by women here include food, chemicals, paper, printing, textiles, clothing, leather, wood, metal, pottery, transportation and business generally.

Popular Spirit In France

BY HENRY WOOD

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Paris, July 4 (By Mail).—"There is not a single piece of gold to be found in my house today."

With eyes flashing pride and voice vibrating with enthusiasm these words were pronounced to me by Professor Alcide Betrine of No. 166 Boulevard Montparnasse. I picked him at random to tell me something of the spirit of the French people after two years of war.

Professor Betrine has grown gray in the public school service of France. He is entitled to retire on a pension but he won't do it while the war lasts. Professor Betrine is proud to be able to say:

"For the first time in my life and in generations in the history of my family, there is not a single gold piece to be found in my house today. I have turned it all in to the Bank of France for the national defense."

The boast of Professor Betrine today is the boast of practically every family in France. Within the last year the French voluntarily have exchanged for flimsy French bank notes over $325,000,000 gold. This stream of gold has been flowing for a year and is still flowing at from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 a week. Such is the spirit of the French after two years of war.

"In every French family there are but two great passions—the only son and the little family hoard of gold."

It is the "little hoard of gold" on which every French household is built. Gold, in the popular French conception, is the one real, tangible thing in life on which anyone under any circumstances, can always count. It is the family's life, death, accident, health, marriage and disaster insurance in one.

Even if the "Boches" had actually reached Paris, the average Frenchman would have known he could still count on his gold to help him out.

This confidence in gold has reached in France, among the masses the status almost of a fetish. In thousands of families the gold has passed from generation to generation and been added to until it has taken on the additional sentimental value of a most highly prized heirloom. The average Frenchman figures his future and that of his family on his gold reserve.

Knowing all this, the government did not hesitate to ask for it. But it asked, it did not command. It knew that however much the gold meant to its sons and daughters, "La Patrie" meant much more.

The average French family man is inclined to be rather hard headed, calculating money-seeking and saving. "Hard-headed thrift" might easily pass as the motto in French family life.

Early in the war there was published in France and elsewhere an article of presumed German origin explaining why the war with France would not last long.

The French common people, it asserted, would never permit the war to reach a point where it would effect either their regular sources of income or the amount of money they might already have saved. That was one of the things the Germans counted on for a quick short campaign in France before turning to smash Russia.

Germany was mistaken as in the Irish rebellion, Canadian secession and Mohammedan uprising in English colonies. The French population has placed patriotism before pocket books.

The greatest test that could be applied to the French people after they had parted with their sons was to ask them to part without a soul

of recompense or premium, with their little family hoard of gold.

This is far from telling all the story of the possibilities of French thrift. It has enabled them to do far more than give the government gold. The French people have also subscribed some $2,000,000,000 to France's famous "Loan of Victory." French thrift—coupled necessarily with French spirit—has furnished France with the financial means for prosecuting the war. Parting with the gold was purely a matter of patriotic sentiment. Subscribing to the loan was a matter of careful investment. Yet this thrifty investment speaks perhaps more for the spirit of the French people than did the parting with the gold, for the loan subscription spelled in great big capital letters the one word "Confidence" in the financial stability of the French government and in its ability to win the war.

Now a final test is being made of the spirit of the French people. Minister of Finances Ribot has just estimated that there are being held in France no less than $120,000,000,000 of foreign bonds and securities. These would be of the most supreme value to France in enabling her to offer them as security for her large purchase of war and other material in foreign countries, without diminishing her gold reserve and without suffering the terrible rate of exchange—it is nearly 20 per cent in the United States—caused by the disproportion of her importations over her exportations.

So France has asked—not ordered as has been necessary in England—her people to loan her these $120,000,000,000 of foreign securities until after the war. The response has been the same as to the request for gold and for war subscriptions.

Now the Chuck Hole Club. What is a chuck hole club? It consists of four or five men or boys, one of whom has an automobile. Each member provides himself with a pick, shovel or spade; they climb into the car and fill every chuckhole, bad bridge approach and any other bad spot in their neighborhood that does not require the work of a regular road gang.

At the Best

Muriel Ostriche, one of filmdom’s youngest stars, and one who is really and truly young, will be the attraction at the Best theatre tonight when she will be featured in a World Film photoplay, “Sally in Our Alley,” with Carlyle Blackwell, the prince of popularity. This is a play in which both stars have excellent opportunities to show their mettle, and, needless to state, they take every advantage offered them to show why they are at the top of the ladder of motion picture favorites. Both their work and the play itself will be a matter of great admiration by all who see this wonderful play when it is shown in this city tonight.

Tomorrow, the Metro wonderplay, “The Spell of the Yukon,” with Edmund Breese in the leading role, is all that is to be desired in photodrama. Thrills are not lacking and the story is gripping from start to finish.

Mutt & Jeff also appear in another screaming cartoon comedy.

DONALD WHITE DEAD

Son of Ira C. White Died of Bowel Trouble, Funeral to be on Monday, Sept. 18

Donald White, age 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira C. White, 219 North Tenth street, died of bowel trouble following a week’s illness. The little fellow was cheerfulness personified during his illness and up to the last always told the nurse and his parents that he was getting better. He was a sturdy boy who had never been sick before. He lost weight rapidly and when death came he passed away as in sleep.

He was conscious to the end. Donald thought much of school this year, for he was to enter the fall term. The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon at 2:30 o’clock from McNamara’s undertaking rooms. The sympathy of their many friends is extended the family in its sad bereavement.

Herman Tollefson, age 7 months, son of Mr. and Mrs. Severn Tollefson, 1406 Laurel street, died of inflammation of the bowels. The funeral was held Saturday afternoon. The sincere sympathy of the community is extended the bereaved family.

STORIES TODAY

The Pillager county fair is getting to be so good that Editor Lee M. Bennett, of the Pillager Herald, burst out into five verses with a fancy border on the front page, telling all the fine points of the fair. He characterized these as five spasms entitled “The County Fair.” It’s poetry because the last words of the lines rhyme.

Supremacy

What makes the piano in Paderewski’s home sound more beautiful than the same piano in any other home? Paderewski’s wonderful art.

What makes a Stradivarius in the hands of masters like Kreisler, Elman, Kubelik and Zimbalist sound as though it were some divinely inspired living thing? The art of these greatest masters.

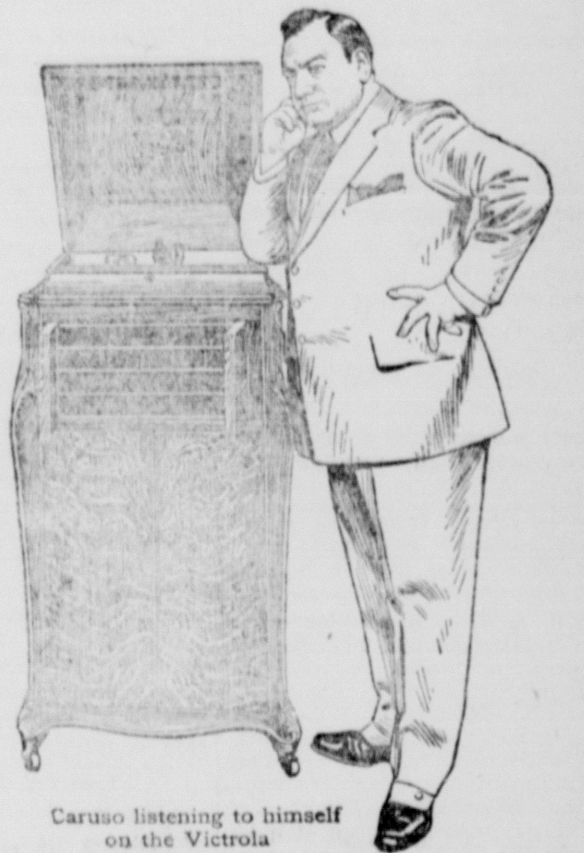

What makes the songs and arias of the great composers so incomparably beautiful? The art of Caruso, Amato, Destinn, Farrar, Gluck, Hempel, Homer, McCormack, Melba, Ruffo, Schumann-Heink, Tetrizzini and all the other great singers who have devoted their lives to the study and interpretation of these works.

Then why should any one attempt to distort this beautiful music by using some foolish accessory “recommended” by manufacturers jealous of the supremacy of the Victrola and Victor Records?

TALKS ON BANKING

The Origin of Savings Banks, All Interested in This Department

When it is considered that in some states such as Massachusetts, one out of every two and a half people have savings bank accounts, and in New York with its great population, one out of three, the intimacy with which the savings bank touches the individual will become manifest. In fact no other institution except the home, the church, or the school comes into such close contact with humanity as does the savings bank. And because it touches the lives of so many people so vitally, the whole body politic is interested in the saving bank and what it does.

Financially speaking no other institution has such a marked effect for good to the individual and the community, as does the bank that takes your money. Every time you cross a well paved street, take a walk in the park, send your children to school, turn in an alarm of fire, draw some water, look with pride upon your public buildings, enter a well kept home, you pay tribute to the institution that made these things possible, and that institution is the savings bank.

While the bank of discount is an indispensable part of business life, and we could not do business without it, the number of patrons of the banks of discount is insignificant in comparison with the depositors of the savings banks of the country, now numbering over ten million.

It is well to know something about this feature of banking, for a savings bank is more than “a place to put money”—it is a great co-operative investment institution, and inasmuch as this is the centennial year of the savings bank and the event will be properly celebrated by the American Bankers association at its annual meeting at Kansas City in September, it is proposed to outline as briefly as possible in the next three or four talks on banking in the present series the fundamental features of the savings bank. Like a great many other institutions that have made for human good, the savings bank is a development, and the origin of the idea is in doubt. Daniel Defoe of “Robinson Crusoe” fame is mentioned as the original savings bank man, who conceived a scheme for the receipt of deposits on the part of the government. Nothing came of it. Presilla Wakefield and Joseph Smith in England also had schemes for the receipt on the part of the well to do, of small savings and the repaying of the same at Christmas time with a bounty, contributed by the wealthy managers; but these endeavors worked on the theory that the poor should be encouraged to save for the sake of the reward offered, and were supported by the donations of the rich, which is far from the saving bank idea. The first man to grasp the fact that the earning power of the money left in the care of the managers should support the institution, was the Rev. Henry Duncan, a Scotch preacher, who in the village of Ruthwell, Scotland, opened his savings bank—the first true savings bank, in 1810, along the lines still in vogue today. This was the first savings bank that had in it the essential elements of success. Impressed with the improvidence of the people of his parish he resolved to found an institution to receive their small savings, invest them for the benefit of the depositor and after paying the expenses of management, return the balance to the depositors as interest. This plan proved so sensible and so helpful that savings banks sprang up all over England and Scotland, and shortly the idea crossed the Atlantic, resulting in the savings bank movement in this country, which closely followed the lines laid down by Duncan’s bank, a brief sketch of which will appear in the next banking talk.

The trail through Crow Wing county will lead through Deerwood, Crosby, Ironton, Riverton to Brainerd. Plans and reports will be brought on this route.

At the Best

Muriel Ostriche, one of filmdom's youngest stars, and one who is really and truly young, will be the attraction at the Best theatre tonight when she will be featured in a World Film photoplay, "Sally in Our Alley," with Carlisle Blackwell, the prince of popularity. This is a play in which both stars have excellent opportunities to show their mettle, and, needless to state, they take every advantage offered them to show why they are at the top of the ladder of motion picture favorites. Both their work and the play itself will be a matter of great admiration by all who see this wonderful play when it is shown in this city tonight.

Tomorrow, the Metro wonderplay, "The Spell of the Yukon," with Edmund Breese in the leading role, is all that is to be desired in photodrama. Thrills are not lacking and the story is gripping from start to finish.

Mutt & Jeff also appear in another screaming cartoon comedy.

DONALD WHITE DEAD

Son of Ira C. White Died of Bowel Trouble, Funeral to be on Monday, Sept. 18

Donald White, age 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira C. White, 219 North Tenth street, died of bowel trouble following a week's illness. The little fellow was cheerfulness personified during his illness and up to the last always told the nurse and his parents that he was getting better. He was a sturdy boy who had never been sick before. He lost weight rapidly and when death came he passed away as in sleep.

He was conscious to the end. Donald thought much of school this year, for he was to enter the fall term. The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from McNamara's undertaking rooms. The sympathy of their many friends is extended the family in its sad bereavement.

Herman Tollefson, age 7 months, son of Mr. and Mrs. Severn Tollefson, 1406 Laurel street, died of inflammation of the bowels. The funeral was held Saturday afternoon. The sincere sympathy of the community is extended the bereaved family.

DEATH TOLL OF LITTLE ONES

Cholera Infantum Cause of Death of Five in One Week, Not Checked by the Cold

SICKNESS LASTS ABOUT A WEEK

Doctors in Many Cases Seem Powerless to Check the Ravages of the Disease

Brainerd is experiencing an epidemic of bowel trouble which is proving fatal to little ones and causing severe sickness among adults. In one week in Brainerd five little ones were claimed by death.

The griping pains and bowel trouble have caused loss in weight in adults who have been stricken. The cold weather was thought by many would act as a deterrent to the sickness, but it has again cropped out and another boy, age 6, son of Ira C. White was stricken and died.

80,000 MAY QUIT MONDAY

New York Labor Leaders Call for Poll of Trades.

COMMISSION CRITICIZES MEN

Public Service Commission Declares Company Has Not Violated Compact, as Alleged by Union—J. P. Morgan Firm to Be Involved.

New York, Sept. 16.—Eighty thousand workers in crafts closely affiliated with the operation of New York's traction lines are expected to go on strike by Monday, it was announced at the close of a meeting of the Central Federated union here.

Representatives of 400,000 unionized employees were at the meeting. It was said, and passed a resolution calling on each trade to ascertain the sentiment of members regarding a general strike in sympathy with the carmen here who quit their places Sept. 6.

Some May Strike at Once.

Ernest Bohm, secretary of the Central Federated union, said that the trades which would be drawn into the strike now were the harbor men, longshoremen, teamsters, engineers, firemen and plumbers. Some, he asserted, had announced they would strike today.

A referendum has been in progress among many of the crafts for several days, and if the sympathetic strike is authorized, union leaders predict it will be the most effective blow that could be dealt.

Machinists Are Ready.

The only craft upon which figures were available was the machinists, and it was said their vote showed about 70 per cent of the membership favoring a sympathetic strike.

Most of these are employed in plants manufacturing munitions of war for the allies. The effect of the strike in that trade, they say, would be a direct blow at the Morgan interests, the largest holders of stock in the Interborough Rapid Transit company.

J. P. Morgan & Co. are the fiscal agents of the British government in this country.

Two Traction Accidents.

Several persons were injured, none of them seriously, in two traction accidents.

The public service commission brought its inquiry into the strike to a close. A statement issued with regard to the situation on the Third Avenue Railway company's lines said there was no evidence of bad faith on the part of the company or any indication that it was the company's intention to violate the agreement of Aug. 1, which ended the former car strike.

The commission added that it did find evidence of suspicion on the part of the men to violate the agreement.

"The strike should be called off at once and the agreement of Aug. 7 should be lived up to in letter and spirit," the statement concluded.

Why He Resigned.

"So you resigned?"

"Yes. I couldn't stand the way the firm treated me."

"What did they do?"

DETROIT'S IMPRESSIONS OF A MAN.

Governor Hughes' visit to Detroit opened the presidential campaign of 1916 and if we may forecast the events that are to follow by the omens of Monday we would prognosticate an intensely warm, vivid and humanly interesting period in the next few months.

Setting aside the auspices of meteorological conditions in this provision of the future—although they are approved by numerous professional augurs and by a host of commonality as well—we base this prophecy on the characteristics of the candidate whose too brief stay with us has been enjoyed by all with whom he came into contact.

The misguiding individuals who have been expecting Charles E. Hughes would prove to be a cold proposition and therefore easy to beat are in for a shock that will make them think they have been hit by an uninsulated trolley wire. There is nothing cold about Mr. Hughes, Detroit has learned. He is about as intensely human a piece of humanity as ever captured the hearts of a crowd, and the more people in the United States he meets between now and November the more votes will be cast for him. As a campaigner he is a revelation. He likes his fellow beings, and they like him because they see he likes them.

And what his personality begins his remarkable powers of intellect and utterance finish. He drives his points home with tremendous force. What he says sticks. There are thousands of Americans today who can retell every step in the arguments he made eight years ago on the Bryan trust policy, yet in 1908 Mr. Hughes was not especially a prominent figure and there was no particular reason why his address more than others should have remained clearly in the memory except the gift of the man to send his own thoughts so deep into the brains of others. They are clear in his own mind first, undoubtedly. He knows precisely what he wants to say because he has reasoned it out before he speaks it out. Probably that has something to do with the ease with which he conveys his meaning. But it is a very rare quality he possesses in his ability to master subjects so thoroughly as to make the most abstruse simple to himself and his hearers. It is a quality eminently desirable in a political candidate; it is infinitely more so in the president of a great country like the United States.

Detroit's impression of Charles E. Hughes is all favorable. The thousands of people who have studied him at close range are convinced that if he is elected president next November he will be a great president, one of the greatest this nation has known, worthy to stand in history with George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, a custodian of the republic's fate to whom that fate may confidently be intrusted. If that conviction is shared by the people of other states whom he is still to meet, the outcome of his swing around the great American circle cannot fail to be propitious for him.—Detroit Free Press.

BLOODY PROSPERITY.

"No one disputes a temporary prosperity in our land today. But it is sectional in its factory aspect, abnormal in its fevered rush, fictitious in its essentials, and perverting in its tendency. Worse, it is the gold sluiced from the river of blood, poured out by the horrifying sacrifice of millions of our fellow men. God forbid that we should boast a prosperity wrought in such waste of human life. We had rather rejoice in the prosperity of peace."—United States Senator Warren G. Harding.

VALDEZ RECOGNITION TO BRING A REVOLT

Washington, Sept. 16.—Recognition by the United States of President-elect Valdez after he takes office Oct. 1, may be a signal for a revolution by the opposition party in Panama.

Well authenticated rumors are current here that preparations for this revolution are complete, and that opponents of Valdez will seek by armed force to prevent him from assuming the reins of government.

In the Taft and Roosevelt administration the Panama elections were supervised by the United States. Under the Wilson administration this summer, however, this government exercised no supervision.

Since the election, charges of fraud, force, intimidation and other unlawful practices on the part of the successful candidate have been circulated freely.

The state department is understood to have given assurances to the Panamanian charge d'affaires, J. E. Le Fevre that Valdez would be recognized.

BRITAIN'S ACTS STIR CONGRESS

Supports Measures to Enforce American Rights.

TO SAFEGUARD OUR TRADE

British Commerce Has Increased During War, While Other Nations Have Lost Trade—President Wilson and Senator Hughes Both Sign Eight Hour Law Twice.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Sept. 16.—(Special.)—If our government takes advantage of the legislation just passed which allows a retaliation against those countries which treat our commerce and our people unfairly it will be very pleasing to a large number of people in the national capital who have watched with growing indignation the encroachments of Great Britain and the rather insolent manner in which the protests of the government have been treated.

In spite of talk about "hands across the sea," and the arbitration treaties which have been negotiated, and the "cousins" and such other coddling, there is yet in the minds of the American people a deep seated conviction that the British are ever ready to take advantage of conditions to increase their trade and injure that of America.

"Nation of Dollars."

The oft repeated phrase, heard both in England and Canada since the war began, when attempts have been made to enforce American rights, that the United States is a "nation of dollars," does not have much effect in view of the fact that Britain has prospered during the war as at no time in her history. Her trade has largely increased while her colonial have been doing her fighting.

The temper of congress is such that it will back up anything the executive may do to assert American rights, as there were no dissenting votes to the several propositions which have been put into law.

A Much Signed Measure.

It was said that Senator Hughes of New Jersey, who was temporarily presiding at the time the eight hour law was passed, signed the measure twice in order to make it strictly legal. President Wilson, having signed it on Sunday, signed it again in order to have no question raised about its regularity.

What's a Stoughten Bottle?

Senator Owen was making a speech on one of several subjects that yet discussed in the senate and said that some years ago when an offer came from the Democratic side to help enact certain legislation the "Republican leaders sat like so many stoughten bottles."

"What is a stoughten bottle?" was a question asked by several senators. "A stoughten bottle is an inanimate body, comparable to an animate Cheshire cat, which grins in derision and offers no relief," was Owen's explanation.

But the Oklahoma senator did not give the true explanation. Whatever may be the origin, the stoughten bottle is a solid, almost immovable object and one that rarely tips over.

End of the Session Rush.

There was the greatest kind of scramble at the end of the session to get bills through. Such is always the case. For weeks before adjournment legislation gets blocked in the senate while a contested measure holds sway. Then when there is an opening senators crowd forward with demands for all their local bills, and all sorts of measures are passed.

If a fellow has a doubtful proposition the end of the session is the best time for him to bring it forward, and few questions are asked, and no senator feels like objecting to another's bill, because there may be retaliation.

Matter of Understanding.

Neither President Pro Tem. Clarke nor Chairman Simmons of the finance committee talk very plainly in the senate. During one of the last days the revenue bill was under consideration Simmons made a statement.

"The chair has difficulty in understanding the senator from North Carolina," remarked Clarke rather petulantly.

"The senator from North Carolina has great difficulty in understanding the chair," retorted Simmons.

And the stenographers smiled, for they are the men that have got to hear and understand both these senators.

Do Not Like the Prospect.

A lot of southern senators, those who have been renominated by their parties, do not like the prospect of going in northern states to make campaigns. They have had to make their own campaigns for renomination during the summer, and now the national committee wants them to talk in the doubtful and fighting states.

They are willing to go for a few weeks for a short campaign, such as that in Maine, but they do not like to spend the next two months making speeches for the Democratic party.

Some of them will not do it.

Senate Brevity.

Senator Reed of Missouri was about to begin a statement, and he said he would be "exceedingly brief." Then he went on and talked for more than half an hour. That was a good example of senate brevity.

CHARLES E. HUGHES.

FLASHES FROM HUGHES' DETROIT TALKS

AMERICAN RIGHTS.

"No one could successfully present to an American audience that an American citizen's rights stopped with the coast line."

"There is not a particle of militarism in my composition, but there is Americanism in its place, and if elected, I am going to see that American rights are protected."

LABOR.

"The working man is not asking anything he should not have. All he wants is a square deal."

"No such thing as prosperity exists for just one class in America, unless it exists for all."

"The Republican party does not stand for the prosperity produced by the war, but for a prosperity produced by sound American policies and these are what we propose to have."

PREPAREDNESS.

"Do not let us get this country into a low patriotic plane so that we are content with disesteem, with the scoff of the world."

"I am an American citizen," ought to be the proudest title in the world."

CIVIL SERVICE.

"We had in the coast and geodetic survey an eminent scientist. He was displaced to make room for an excellent stock breeder."

"It is the most unworthy thing an administration can do to take public business and pay political debts with it."

BEST EVIDENCE.

New York "World" accuses Mr. Hughes of being pro-German.

"The Fatherland," the organ of those who would have the United States violate its neutrality for Germany's benefit, asks Mr. Hughes ten questions which are designed to carry the accusation that he is pro-British.

These directly conflicting charges against him will be regarded as the best evidence that he is just plain American, without bias toward either side.—Albany Journal.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HUGHES' ADDRESS IN CHICAGO

"As I was one hundred per cent judge I became one hundred per cent candidate."

"The most serious charge against the present administration is putting incompetent men into important positions."

"I propose that when a man goes to represent the American people he shall be looked upon with respect and esteem."

"Nobody has the right to pay political debts with the good name and the honor of the United States."

"I propose to have no more 'kiss me and I'll kiss you' appropriations in Congress."

Democrats who harbored hopes that Josephus would catch the virus from the Bryan and Garrison resignations are still nursing their disappointment. Nothing remains for them but to resign to a realization that Josephus will not resign.

President Wilson is now anxious to have it thought that there was no withdrawal of troops from Mexico at the request of Carranza. Why not go one better and declare that he never had any troops in Mexico to withdraw?

THE NEWEST REMEDY FOR

Backache, Rheumatism and Dropsy.

Kidney, Bladder and Urlic Acid troubles bring misery to many. When the kidneys are weak or diseased, these natural filters do not cleanse the blood sufficiently, and the poisons are carried to all parts of the body. There follow depression, aches and pains, heaviness, drowsiness, irritability, headaches, chilliness and rheumatism. In some people there are sharp pains in the back and joints, distressing bladder disorders and sometimes obstinate dropsy. The uric acid sometimes forms into gravel or kidney stones. When the uric acid affects the muscles and joints, it causes lumbago, rheumatism, gout or sciatica. This is the time to try Anuria.

During digestion uric acid is absorbed into the system from meat eaten, and even from some vegetables. The poor kidneys get tired and backache begins. This is a good time to take "Anuria," the new discovery of Dr. Pierce for kidney trouble and backache. Neglected kidney trouble is responsible for many deaths, and Insurance Company examining doctors always test the water of an applicant before a policy will be issued. Have you ever set aside a bottle of water for twenty-four hours? A heavy sediment or settling sometimes indicates kidney trouble. The true nature and character of diseases, especially those of the kidneys and urinary organs, can often be determined by a careful chemical analysis and microscopic examination—this is done by expert chemists of the Medical Staff of the Invalids' Hotel. If you wish to know your condition send a sample of your water to Doctor Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and describe your symptoms. It will be examined without any expense to you, and Doctor Pierce or his Staff of Consulting Physicians will inform you truthfully.

The Man Who Smashed Glasses In a London Tavern.

One day a bulky, tall, pale faced gentleman with bushy, restless eyebrows entered a London tavern. The waiter did not ask him for his order, but immediately brought him a plate of bread and cheese and a glass of ale. Having consumed his lunch, the guest sat upright in his chair for awhile, leaning his hands on a heavy walking cane and staring blankly at the opposite wall as if in a dream.

Of a sudden he gave a start. He seized the empty glass and dashed it to the floor with all his might, smashing it to atoms. He then reflected for a moment, laid a coin on the table, got up and left the inn without a word to any one.

After his departure another guest had the curiosity to ask the waiter whether the gentleman who had just gone out was not wrong in his head. Quoth the waiter:

"Oh, no, sir! That's nothink unusual with 'im, sir. 'E's broke maybe a 'undred glasses since 'e's been a-comin' to this 'ouse. 'E 'eem to know it when 'e does it. New York Labor Leaders Call for Poll of Trades.

COMMISSION CRITICIZES MEN

Public Service Commission Declares Company Has Not Violated Compact, as Alleged by Union—J. P. Morgan Firm to Be Involved.

New York, Sept. 16.—Eighty thousand workers in crafts closely affiliated with the operation of New York's traction lines are expected to go on strike by Monday, it was announced at the close of a meeting of the Central Federated union here.

It is a quality eminently desirable in a political candidate; it is infinitely more so in a president of a great country like the United States.

Detroit's impression of Charles E. Hughes is all favorable. The thousands of people who have studied him at close range are convinced that if he is elected president next November he will be a great president, one of the greatest this nation has known, worthy to stand in history with George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, a custodian of the republic's fate to whom that fate may confidently be entrusted. If that conviction is shared by the people of other states whom he is still to meet, the outcome of his swing around the great American circle cannot fail to be propitious for him.—Detroit Free Press.

BLOODY PROSPERITY.

"No one disputes a temporary prosperity in our land today. But it is sectional in its factory aspect, abnormal in its fevered rush, fictitious in its essentials, and perverting in its tendency. Worse, it is the gold sluiced from the river of blood, poured out by the horrifying sacrifice of millions of our fellow men. God forbid that we should boast a prosperity wrought in such waste of human life. We had rather rejoice in the prosperity of peace."—United States Senator Warren G. Harding.

VALDEZ RECOGNITION TO BRING A REVOLT

Washington, Sept. 16.—Recognition by the United States of President-elect Valdez after he takes office Oct. 1, may be a signal for a revolution by the opposition party in Panama.

Well authenticated rumors are current here that preparations for this revolution are complete, and that opponents of Valdez will seek by armed force to prevent him from assuming the reins of government.

In the Taft and Roosevelt administration the Panama elections were supervised by the United States. Under the Wilson administration this summer, however, this government exercised no supervision.

Since the election, charges of fraud, force, intimidation and other unlawful practices on the part of the successful candidate have been circulated freely.

The state department is understood to have given assurances to the Panamanian charge d'affaires, J. E. Le Fevre that Valdez would be recognized.

Denison, Ia., Sept. 16.—The congregation of the Baptist church here has accepted a proposition made by Mrs. E. P. Williams to fill the pulpit made vacant a few days ago by the death of her husband.

Mrs. Williams will fill the pulpit until the congregation can choose her successor.

BRITAIN'S ACTS STIR CONGRESS

Supports Measures to Enforce American Rights.

TO SAFEGUARD OUR TRADE

British Commerce Has Increased During War, While Other Nations Have Lost Trade—President Wilson and Senator Hughes Both Sign Eight Hour Law Twice.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—If our government takes advantage of the legislation just passed which allows a retaliation against those countries which treat our commerce and our people unfairly it will be very pleasing to a large number of people in the national capital who have watched with growing indignation the encroachments of Great Britain and the rather insolent manner in which the protests of the government have been treated.

In spite of talk about "hands across the sea," and the arbitration treaties which have been negotiated, and the "cousins" and such other coddling, there is yet in the minds of the American people a deep seated conviction that the British are ever ready to take advantage of conditions to increase their trade and injure that of America.

"Nation of Dollars."

The oft repeated phrase, heard both in England and Canada since the war began, when attempts have been made to enforce American rights, that the United States is a "nation of dollars," does not have much effect in view of the fact that Britain has prospered during the war as at no time in her history. Her trade has largely increased while her colonials have been doing her fighting.

The temper of congress is such that it will back up anything the executive may do to assert American rights, as there were no dissenting votes to the several propositions which have been put into law.

A Much Signed Measure.

It was said that Senator Hughes of New Jersey, who was temporarily presiding at the time the eight hour law was passed, signed the measure twice in order to make it strictly legal. President Wilson, having signed it on Sunday, signed it again in order to have no question raised about its regularity.

What's a Stoughten Bottle?

Senator Owen was making a speech on one of several subjects that get discussed in the senate and said that some years ago when an offer came from the Democratic side to help enact certain legislation the "Republican leaders sat like so many stoughten bottles."

"What is a stoughten bottle?" was a question asked by several senators. "A stoughten bottle is an inanimate body, comparable to an animate Cheshire cat, which grins in derision and offers no relief," was Owen's explanation.

But the Oklahoma senator did not give the true explanation. Whatever may be the origin, the stoughten bottle is a solid, almost immovable object and one that rarely tips over.

End of the Session Rush.

There was the greatest kind of scramble at the end of the session to get bills through. Such is always the case. For weeks before adjournment legislation gets blocked in the senate while a contested measure holds sway. Then when there is an opening senators crowd forward with demands for all their local bills, and all sorts of measures are passed.

If a fellow has a doubtful proposition the end of the session is the best time for him to bring it forward, and few questions are asked, and no senator feels like objecting to another's bill, because there may be retaliation.

Matter of Understanding.

Neither President Pro Tem Clark nor Chairman Simmons of the finance committee talk very plainly in the senate. During one of the last days the revenue bill was under consideration Simmons made a statement.

"The chair has difficulty in understanding the senator from North Carolina," remarked Clarke rather petulantly.

"The senator from North Carolina has great difficulty in understanding the chair," retorted Simmons.

And the stenographers smiled, for they are the men that have got to hear and understand both these senators.

Do Not Like the Prospect.

A lot of southern senators, those who have been renominated by their parties, do not like the prospect of going in northern states to make campaigns. They have had to make their own campaigns for renomination during the summer, and now the national committee wants them to talk in the doubtful and fighting states.

They are willing to go for a few weeks for a short campaign, such as that in Maine, but they do not like to spend the next two months making speeches for the Democratic party. Some of them will not do it.

Senate Brevity.

Senator Reed of Missouri was about to begin a statement, and he said he would be "exceedingly brief." Then he went on and talked for more than half an hour. That was a good example of senate brevity.

CHARLES E. HUGHES.

FLASHES FROM HUGHES' DETROIT TALKS

AMERICAN RIGHTS.

"No one could successfully present to an American audience that an American citizen's rights stopped with the coast line."

"There is not a particle of militarism in my composition, but there is Americanism in its place, and if elected, I am going to see that American rights are protected."

LABOR.

"The working man is not asking anything he should not have. All he wants is a square deal."

"No such thing as prosperity exists for just one class in America, unless it exists for all."

"The Republican party does not stand for the prosperity produced by the war, but for a prosperity produced by sound American policies and these are what we propose to have."

PREPAREDNESS.

"Do not let us get this country into a low patriotic plane so that we are content with disesteem, with the scold of the world."

"I am an American citizen," ought to be the proudest title in the world."

CIVIL SERVICE.

"We had in the coast and geodetic survey an eminent scientist. He was displaced to make room for an excellent stock breeder."

"It is the most unworthy thing an administration can do to take public business and pay political debts with it."

BEST EVIDENCE.

New York "World" accuses Mr. Hughes of being pro-German.

"The Fatherland," the organ of those who would have the United States violate its neutrality for Germany's benefit, asks Mr. Hughes ten questions which are designed to carry the accusation that he is pro-British.

These directly conflicting charges against him will be regarded as the best evidence that he is just plain American, without bias toward either side.—Albany Journal.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HUGHES' ADDRESS IN CHICAGO

"As I was one hundred per cent judge I became one hundred per cent candidate."

"The most serious charge against the present administration is putting incompetent men into important positions."

"I propose that when a man goes to represent the American people he shall be looked upon with respect and esteem."

"Nobody has the right to pay political debts with the good name and the honor of the United States."

"I propose to have no more 'kiss me and I'll kiss you' appropriations in Congress."

Democrats who harbored hopes that Josephus would catch the virus from the Bryan and Garrison resignations are still nursing their disappointment. Nothing remains for them but to resign to a realization that Josephus will not resign.

President Wilson is now anxious to have it thought that there was no withdrawal of troops from Mexico at the request of Carranza. Why not go one better and declare that we never had any troops in Mexico to withdraw?

THE NEWEST REMEDY FOR

Backache, Rheumatism and Dropsy.

Kidney, Bladder and Uric Acid troubles bring misery to many. When the kidneys are weak or diseased, these natural filters do not cleanse the blood sufficiently, and the poisons are carried to all parts of the body. There follow depression, aches and pains, heaviness, drowsiness, irritability, headaches, chilliness and rheumatism. In some people there are sharp pains in the back and loins, distressing bladder disorders and sometimes obstinate dropsy. The uric acid sometimes forms into gravel or kidney stones. When the uric acid affects the muscles and joints, it causes lumbago, rheumatism, gout or sciatica. This is the time to try "Anurie."

During digestion uric acid is absorbed into the system from meat eaten, and even from some vegetables. The poor kidneys get tired and backache begins. This is a good time to take "Anurie," the new discovery of Dr. Pierce for Kidney trouble and Backache. Neglected kidney trouble is responsible for many deaths, and Insurance Company examining doctors always test the water of an applicant before a policy will be issued. Have you ever set aside a bottle of water for twenty-four hours? A heavy sediment or settling sometimes indicates kidney trouble. The true nature and character of diseases, especially those of the kidneys and urinary organs, can often be determined by a careful chemical analysis and microscopic examination—this is done by expert chemists of the Medical Staff of the Invalids' Hotel. If you wish to know your condition send a sample of your water to Doctor Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and describe your symptoms. It will be examined without any expense to you, and Doctor Pierce or his Staff of Assisting Physicians will inform you truthfully.

KNOW THYSELF!

Read all about yourself, your system, physiology, anatomy, hygiene, simple home cures, etc., in the "Common Sense Medical Advisor," a book of 308 pages. Send to Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., three dimes or thirty cents in one-cent stamps for a cloth-bound copy.

FREAKS OF A GENIUS.

The Man Who Smashed Glasses In a London Tavern.

One day a bulky, tall, pale faced gentleman with bushy, restless eyebrows entered a London tavern. The waiter did not ask him for his order, but immediately brought him a plate of bread and cheese and a glass of ale. Having consumed his lunch, the guest sat upright in his chair for awhile, leaning his hands on a heavy walking cane and staring blankly at the opposite wall as if in a dream.

Of a sudden he gave a start. He seized the empty glass and dashed it to the floor with all his might, smashing it to atoms. He then reflected for a moment, laid a coin on the table, got up and left the inn without a word to any one.

After his departure another guest had the curiosity to ask the waiter whether the gentleman who had just gone out was not wrong in his head. Quoth the waiter:

"Oh, no, sir! That's nothink unusual with 'im, sirl. 'E's broke maybe a 'undred glasses since 'e's been a-comin' to this 'ouse. 'E don't seem to know it when 'e does it. 'E jist gits a-thinkin' and seems to git bangst at somethink 'e's thinkin' about. It's the great Lord Maculay, sir."—St. James' Gazette.

GOODBY TO "A LA" ON MENUS.

Stewards' Association Decides to Shake Off Foreign Yoke.

New York—Winding up a three day convention with a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria, members of the International Stewards' association declared their independence of "a la" and other foreign tyrants of the menu card. "Let us shake off this foreign yoke that so demeans us," demanded E. H. Niles, "creating instead an American system. Let our hotel press show the world that we are able to run our hotels without foreign help or languages."
